

CHARITY QUIZ NIGHT

If you thought that Kanye West had a big ego, the Society's Young Lawyers Committee's 2015 Charity Quiz Night proved that to be the understatement of the year. Young and not so young members of the legal profession turned out in force to prove that the masterminds on their team deserved the winning title that night, answering conundrums spanning the servers of LexisNexis to the latest Chet Faker hit. This battle of the brains made the Mayweather vs Pacquiao fight look like an episode of Barney and Friends.

The event was hosted by the Hyatt Hotel and took place on a clear winter evening in July. Teams of up to eight put their reputations on the line and competed to be the champion. The threat of taking home the wooden spoon and being crowned loser was not enough to put anyone off.

Each round had a different topic allowing every member of the office to participate. Even old Gladys, the twerking Nicki Minaj fanatic from the 3rd floor, had something to say. With fiery spirits and the liquor flowing, the competition was heating up.

Attendees were treated to the MCing skills of the YLC Working Group chairs. The MCs jokes were well received and lighthearted, in keeping with the theme of the evening.

The inventive array of team names reinforced the profession's creative skills. However some would say these inventive names were merely a facade to disguise a firm's disgraceful performance!

The competition was closely fought with the winner being decided in the final round. The well-attended evening raised over $750 for the Chief Justice's Law Week Youth Appeal. John Toohey Chambers and friends took the top score of the night followed closely by DLA Piper and Herbert Smith Freehills.
